

The WorldFish Center works with partners to reduce poverty and hunger by developing science-based solutions necessary for:

- Expanding sustainable aquaculture and
- Ensuring productive and resilient small-scale fisheries

The Center's work helps achieve the targets laid down by the United Nations in the Millennium Development Goals. Our work contributes to the understanding of climate change and the alleviation of its effects. A focus on gender equity underpins everything we do. With our partners we develop "international public goods" with global applications.

We organize our work agenda according to three regional portfolios: Asia, Africa and the South Pacific and have offices in 8 countries. From these bases we work in more than 25 countries with more than 200 partners. With over 250 staff, including 38 Ph.D. scientists we have strong scientific capacities across our three disciplinary programs: Policy, Economics, and Social Sciences; Natural Resource Management, and Aquaculture and Genetic Improvement

Reducing poverty and hunger by improving fisheries and aquaculture

WorldFish is one of 15 international agricultural centers in the Consortium of CGIAR Centers. Funding and support is provided through the CGIAR membership composed of governments, development banks, philanthropic organizations and private foundations.

An assessment of impact shows that every $100 invested in work undertaken by The WorldFish Center and partners results in $134 worth of benefits to the poor, annually.
